"On a positive note, it is already common to see contractual arrangements in place between UK

financial advisers.

"The same kind of firms will simply extend their relationships to include the other required parties.

"From the client's perspective, this is unlikely to be favourable. An unwieldy arrangement anyway, it is always easier to take on board and understand advice where it runs concurrently from one point to another.

"Receiving four or five different but connected documents, and having to pull them all together to understand the overall position, is difficult for anybody to do."

"Thanks to the increasingly complicated nature of UK pension transfers overseas, this is certainly not something that you should undertake without first seeking some advice on the subject from an expert.

James McLeod, head of pensions at AES International, said: "Those people lucky enough to have squeezed through HMRC's

September 7 will now have almost complete control over their pensions, for the first time.

"The list of investments

Justin Harris, managing director of Chase Belgrave, said: "The lesson from this episode should be that the pensions environment in the UK is highly fluid. Just as the removal of the bulk of the Australian Qrops showed, possibilities can and do change.

"Expats should not delay in exploring the options available to them. It is also more important than ever to retain specialist financial advice. It is not enough to assume that a particular course of action may or may not be possible or prudent."

Some people did manage to take advantage of the loophole to move their scheme before it was closed.

Once their transfer is complete they will need to consider what to do with their pension next.
